Presenter and Facilitator We have, each and every one of us, all the resources we need to solve whatever comes to us both now and in the future. What we require are the skills to simply call on those resources when they are needed. It is not so much a matter of changing people as rather getting them to work with the abilities and talents that are inherent in them already. It is out of this conviction that FOUNDATION offers a wide variety of workshops and seminars for both the individual and the world of business that are designed to call forth what we already have in abundance. Christopher Nevill: Founder of Foundation. His work is internationally respected and honoured. He consults to organisations both large and small here in South Africa as well as Europe and the United Kingdom. He has a reputation for approaching matters that concern us all both personal and business, from a different angle. His methods are effective and produce swift, often startling results. Some comments on Christopher's work “We were looking for a different approach to this very tricky and delicate subject. Christopher has helped us craft a fresh and original approach coupled with useful and practical techniques.” J – Director, IT Company “Christopher's approach is robust and not always comfortable. However as he will tell you himself, agreement is not required. What is required is that you examine what you believe to be right against your results. The work is at the same time practical and useful. Stimulating.” W – Senior Change Manager FMCG Company
